

Karsten Danzmann

AEI Hannover

Low-frequency gravitational wave detectors in space

Authors: K. Danzmann

The low-frequency part of the gravitational wave spectrum, from 100 micro-Hertz up to 1 Hz, contains the most spectacular sources of gravitational waves. Really high precision measurements are possible here, making this frequency range very interesting for both Astronomy and Fundamental Physics. To open this window for observations, we need an observatory in space!